

ESG, an Introduction to the Current State of the Movement.

Randy Neumann Element

ESG, Environmental Social Governance.

ESG is not new but it is gaining momentum.

ESG is the acronym for Environmental, Social and Governance function and actions of all businesses and governments.

It continues to play a greater role in the finance and sustainability of all companies. Through these financial pressures and actions the intent is to make the globe more environmentally sound, improve the well being of all people and bring forth a more open and accountable platform for business and government.

Environmental will be discussed including the 3 scopes used to drive the actions

Social will be discussed in what companies and governments are doing to make opportunities and law to provide all people a path to equality.

Governance will be discussed to bring forth what is being asked for or required by investors.

A summary of what Element is doing globally and in the Americas to achieve the goals of the global community.

Randy Neumann

Currently Director of Innovation and Planning in Life Science at Element. 33 years in managing Lab operations at Norwest/Bodycote/Exova/Element. Volunteer Director at ESSA for 6 years and CCIL for 12 years. B.Sc. Chemistry from the University of Alberta.